Derg XD 0. 3.2.1.3.0.3.x-return-of-reckoning-treasure.rar-A mother who drank wine and smoked marijuana while pregnant is fighting to get the drugs back into her system. After learning that they were taken from her 12-year-old daughter, the mother was told that her fetus would be subject to the laws of alcohol and drug abuse. The mother, who has asked to remain anonymous, said she called her doctor's office three weeks ago because she was experiencing complications during her pregnancy. "My stomach was still really bloated," she said. "It was still relatively early in my pregnancy, but I had still been having some cramping and my blood pressure was elevated." During the first prenatal visit, the mother said that she and her doctor discussed marijuana use, and the doctor advised her to stop using it, because it was illegal. The mother said she did not find out about the rules that applied to her fetus until her daughter was in the hospital to have her appendix removed at age 12. The mother said her daughter was also prescribed marijuana for the wound after it started to fester. The mother said she informed the hospital that she wanted to give herself a prescription for the drug. Because of the mother's request to give herself the prescription, she said her physician decided to record it in her medical file. "There's a reason that a file exists for a minor to be given a marijuana prescription," said Dr. Stephen Schluger, the mother's attorney. "There are diseases and conditions, like epilepsy, in which there are valid medical reasons to have a prescription, but marijuana isn't one of those." While marijuana is illegal for adults in the state of Michigan, the law also stipulates that the drugs can be prescribed to minors who have been abused and neglected. The mother said her doctor believed that the medical reasons outweighed the personal reasons, and because she wanted to get the prescription back. "The doctor said that she would write the prescription for the marijuana because it was used as a treatment for children who were abused and neglected," said the mother. "She said that the minor doesn't need to have e79caf774b
